Earnings reports generally favorable, but reactions are mixed

A bid for Basware

During April, the market's focus was on both earnings releases and China's new shutdowns to prevent the spread of covid. China's strict approach to infection control put further pressure on already challenged global supply chains. Overall, earnings reports for the fund's holdings could be described as strong, where most companies managed the global challenges effectively.

A consortium, led by the private equity company Accel-KKR, made a EUR40.1 per share offer for the Finnish software company Basware, corresponding to a premium of around 95 per cent. As such, Basware was a positive contributor to performance during the month.

Trelleborg, the fund's largest holding, delivered a strong quarterly report where organic sales grew by double digits and the company, despite challenging supply chain issues, managed to defend and slightly increase the margin. During the month, Trelleborg also made a complementary acquisition to the company's most important business area, Sealing Solutions. The share price increased 2 per cent.

The Finnish packaging company Huhtamäki's earnings report was a positive surprise with 19 per cent organic growth, mainly because of significant price increases to compensate for the sharp rise in input costs. At the same time, margins decreased clearly less than feared. The report was a relief given that the market was concerned over Huhtamäki's ability to compensate for rising commodity prices. The share price increased 16 per cent.

The measurement technology company Vaisala released a remarkably strong Q1 earnings report with strong organic growth and high margins. The high margins were somewhat surprising as the company had previously signaled that component shortages would have a negative effect on gross margins during 2022. However, economies of scale in production trumped this in Q1 and profits more than doubled compared with the same quarter last year. The company did however stick to its profit and sales forecast for the full year; however, Vaisala is notoriously cautious in its forecasts. The share price increased 3 per cent.

On the negative side was the mobile gaming company MTG, whose sales - like most other companies in the sector - declined organically during the quarter. In addition, the company's margin forecast for the full year was burdened by investments in growth, primarily in the form of marketing. The company will start a share repurchase program at the beginning of May once the proceeds from the sale of the e-sports operations have been received. MTG has a large net cash position that can be expected to benefit shareholders in several ways. The MTG share price fell 24 per cent during the month.

The two healthcare companies, Össur and Terveystalo, saw their margins squeezed for different reasons. The prosthetic company Össur continued to suffer from component shortages and strained supply chains, which had a negative effect on margins. The share price fell 10 per cent. The healthcare company Terveystalo delivered strong organic growth, but profitability was negatively affected by temporarily higher costs due to challenges in meeting the high demand during the quarter. Terveystalo's share price lost 4 per cent, which was nevertheless less than the stock market.

Beijer Ref is a new-old holding that was divested for valuation reasons. Given that the share price came down and the company continues to grow, we have gradually built up a new holding since we consider the company to be well-managed with long-term favorable growth potential. The holdings in Lagercrantz and Lifco were increased during the month. The holdings in NCC and Storskogen were divested as we see better long-term potential for good risk-adjusted returns in other shares; the holding in Securitas was reduced.

Explanations

Benchmark Carnegie Small Cap Sweden Return Index. The unit price of the fund is set before the price of the index is calculated. This can sometimes result in a misleading comparison between the two.

Sharpe ratio Sharpe ratio is a measure of active risk in a fund. Calculated as the ratio of the fund's excess return above the risk-free rate of return and the fund's total risk.

Total risk Given as the standard deviation of variations in the total return of the fund or index.

Tracking error Tracking error is a measure of active risk in a fund. Calculated as the standard deviation of the difference between the return of the fund and its benchmark.

Information ratio A measure of risk-adjusted return. This is measured as the active return divided by the portfolio's active risk.

Alpha Describes the effect of the portfolio manager's decisions on the return of the fund. A positive alpha value is the risk-adjusted excess return relative to the return of the benchmark.

Beta Beta is a measure of a fund's sensitivity to market movements. The beta value reports how much the fund's value changes in percentage terms when the market's value changes by one percentage point.

Active share A measure of the proportion of the portfolio that differ from the benchmark.
